

THE IMPORTANCE OF MULTILINGUALISM IN THE EDUCATION OF CHILDREN

Without a doubt, education around the world has long been one of the most, if not the most discussed and a kind of scandalous topic. Professionals in their field, teachers, doctors of science develop new methods of teaching and educating the younger generation every day. Eventually, as all of us know, children are our future, and happy children are a happy future.

Let's look at the term "happiness", scoring the meaning of this word in Google, you are likely to face such results: "1) The feeling and state of complete, supreme satisfaction. 2) Success, luck." They say that happiness is not in money, most often that's what people of the old season who received diplomas back in the time of the USSR say. However, the Western thinker Napoleon Hill would argue here. In his opinion, money helps to find happiness, longevity and peace of mind. I can say that teenagers are fully in solidarity with this point of view. Remove grandparents from the screen!

Whoever says anything, any established person's priority is comfortable living conditions. At least in our progressive world, where the situation is ruled by Generation "Z". Material wealth, high earnings and career growth are the goal of any creative, ambitious personality. Demand generates supply, so there is no time to sit still, you should keep up with the times. At the stage, it is very important to specify a direct connection with languages, their knowledge and ability to speak them.

There is a theory that half of the world's population is bilingual. That means every second person speaks two or even more languages. Compare the same native Kazakhstan, here almost everyone passerby speaks at least Kazakh and Russian, and now English has become a mandatory requirement for those who want to classify themselves as "erudite". Based on this principle, trilingual education was introduced in the country a couple of three years ago. If then the prospect of having to familiarize yourself with the culture of another country through an unfamiliar language for children is frightening, now most school subjects such as physics, chemistry and biology are conducted directly in English, with all these sciences inherent terms and definitions.

Private schools with paid education additionally take French or German lessons. They make increased pressure on the languages, thereby expanding not only the horizons of the children's capabilities, but also the brain as a whole. Neurobiologists have long proved that intensive immersion in the knowledge of new languages leads to an increase in the Hippocampus area and the volume of gray matter in the brain. Hippocampus is a part of the brain responsible for consolidating memory function, focusing and other vital functions of the body. Accordingly, the benefits of this process are unthinkable huge even for everyday life, where it is not necessary to negotiate with foreigners on a daily basis or maintain a conversation with tourists. It was said for those who are used to shouting to the right and left "I don't need languages, I'll stay in my homeland". Of course, it is necessary to love and honor your homeland and native language. However, do not limit yourself to this reasons, because here we are already talking about the benefits of language for a person not only for communication with other people, although this is inevitable, but also about developing quite basic skills with their help. Is it bad to have a good memory or be able to concentrate in emergency situations? I'm sure each of us had cases when in the middle of the day, we remembered the iron with anxiety in our hearts, and the rest of the day we wondered whether we turned it off. There's a way out - learn languages! And you will no longer have to look into the future, because the well-established work in the hemisphere, which is responsible for memory, will stop failing and will give this information automatically without much effort.

It is not surprising why students of gymnasiums, non-public schools often take leading positions at the Republican Olympiads, and become employees of world-famous companies such as Deloitte, EY, KPMG and PwC in the future. There are jokes on the Internet that to get into one of these teams, you need to sell your soul to the devil and pay a little extra from above. Real hard-workers assure that patience and labor will undermine everything, and knowledge in the field of linguistics will support the result. Another coin in the piggy bank can consider that before you get to a prestigious educational institution, you need to pass the introductory exams first, and it seems that it makes no sense to say exactly what they will be, everything is already very obvious. The next step to the top of the iceberg is mainly interviews, on manifestations of personal qualities of a student. They will reveal how the student can conduct a dialogue, what ligaments he uses in his speech and how great his horizons are to support any of the topics chosen by the examiner. A kind of natural selection that does not spare lazy and irresponsible youngsters. Women from the category "I'm a mother" argue about the correctness of such practices, it seems to them that such measures put a lot of pressure on the child and lead to early stress to not yet strong heads. The fact remains that only children adapted to their current habitat achieve heights and show themselves from completely different angles, both in education and in society. And selection schemes were invented to identify a product that can further develop the country in general or certain areas of activity.

Have you ever been shocked how advanced children are now, they are literally not scared of anything, it is impossible to amaze them with something and indeed to fool their brains. They use difficult words in their vocabulary, which have a deep meaning, and also correspond with each other on social networks using slangs and abbreviations. The most famous are ofc (of course), idk (I don't care), tnx (thanks) and so on. This kind of information fits very quickly in their restless heads, it stays like this for a long time and flows out very skilfully. I dare assume that this resonance is caused by nothing but globalization. Most people have already heard this term once, someone skillfully compares it with today's realities, and for some it sounded in their ears the sea, the surf and the singing of swallows. For those who are still hard with local jokes, there is an insider service that I will actually provide. "Insider" is a person who has access to classified information on his official position. Shall we start?

Globalization, according to the old and good, is a process of global economic, political, cultural and religious integration and unification. And now in the language of ordinary people, globalization is a process taking place in the history of mankind, the main idea of which is that the world will become more united as a result of the exchange of goods, products, information, cultural values. For the first time I heard this word just in additional English lessons, we were given the task to write a thematic essay in the official format. Turning the entire Internet upside down, I never understood the true meaning of Globalization at that time. The only way out was to write what many people write in a language I don't understand, using completely unfamiliar terms. Who would have thought that after so many years, I would fully understand the meaning only thanks to social network, or rather thanks to Tik Tok.

Tik Tok is a kind of video community that is very popular around the world, where users share funny, beautiful and aesthetic videos from their routine, preferably short and concise. The reason I chose this social network is very simple and logical. First of all, it has existed for many years, given the fact that the application had previously worked under the old name "Musically". And after the owner changed, it was renamed. There are no fewer users from this, and even on the contrary, the number of tiktok-obsessed people has doubled or maybe three times. Here we see globalization, because bloggers from all over the world share their content every second, and then their videos spread to all over the world, becoming public domain. People watch each other, borrow ideas and start doing something of their own unique. There is no framework on the Internet regarding gender, nationality, and even more so language. Knows one thing - everyone knows, by this principle it becomes clear why people from all over the world simultaneously learn about new tracks, all of our favorite artists, such as Justin Bieber and Taylor Swift. Despite the fact that they belong to America, this does not mean that we have no rights to be interested in their work. That's how Globalization works in simple words, if you want it even shorter, it's to unite the whole world in completely different ways.

Kazakhs have a popular proverb: "It is important not to make a mistake in two things in life. The first is the choice of profession, and the second is the choice of soul mate. It would seem, what does the language have to do with it? The next paragraph will clearly appeal to romantic dreamers, I am highly sensitive. Since kindergarten, we fall in love, we are interested in those with whom we are in the same environment because of frequent spending time together. At school, it's a boy with whom you sit at the same desk, a group mate at the university from another specialty, and at work just a single colleague who experiences attacks of loneliness like you in the evenings. What can we talk about consciously choosing a partner, because in other words you have to choose from what is, what is left and has not chosen by another. Who guarantees that the person you choose is your soul mate? Can't it be that your lover is currently in another city or country, doing completely different things and has no idea about your existence. And even if you meet one day, there will be a huge gap between you, a speech barrier or even worse, a catastrophically wrong choice has already been made. And all this could have been prevented if you had once studied English and agreed to the same business trip abroad.

Maria Rykina is the author and performer of Kazakh folk songs, her most famous work is "Dudar-ai". A song about love for Kazakh man, which is now a symbol of true feelings, spiritual warmth. This winter, at the "Stars of the Faculty" contest, we showed a scene to this famous song, revealing in an excerpt the theme of the tragic love of a Russian girl for the Kazakh and the impossibility of relationships due to different mentalities and perceptions of the world, upsetting to the heart of all audience.

To give an illustration, I would also like to cite the thirty-six-year-old Italian singer Son Pascal, who once fell in love with a Kazakh girl and at the call of his heart was forced to change his place of residence and make radical changes to his usual life. At first, he had a hard time in a metropolis with a beautiful name Almaty, working for a small audience. Different mentalities and boredom in Rome put him into a state of despair. Nearby was a friend of Anuar Nurpeisov, who never stopped believing in him and soon they saw the fruits of joint labor. The impetus for him was certainly love, he learned a foreign language in a fit of love, wrote a song in a state of love and released it in the name of love. What's not the reason for you?

From all of the above we have discussed, it becomes clear that it is useless to argue about the need and importance of multilingualism in the modern world. There are two pluses for each disadvantage of multilingualism, if not three or four. I believe that sooner or later society will come to the fact that every second person will speak at least five languages and proudly poke themselves in the chest with words like "polyglot!" Time will tell whether it will be in five, ten years or in the next three years. The situation in the world has not been established, it has always changed and will be, so we must be confident in the future, making every effort to break through a place under the sun. Naturally, those who are older will have harder, their brains are hard to perceive new information. And children and students can still catch a good moment and stop waiting for a miracle, not without the help of adults, respectively. Antoine De Saint Exupery noted: "The greatest luxury in the world is the luxury of human communication," so why do we deliberately deprive ourselves and our children of such luxury?

Резюме

В настоящее время изучение особенностей языка и литературы, выделение их различий открыло путь для развития и совершенствования других отраслей языка. Через язык, этнолингвистику, паралингвистику, психоллингвистику, лингвокультурологию широко распространились новые направления, оказавшие значительное влияние на коммуникацию культуры и литературы. Кроме того, лингвистические, лингвостилистические, лингвоэстетические анализы явились основой для сотрудничества и интеграции литературы и языкознания, помимо изучения произведений исторических деятелей и анализа их художественной ценности с лингвистической точки зрения в литературоведении.

Summary

At present, the study of the features of language and literature, highlighting their differences has opened the way for the development and improvement of other branches of the language. Through language, ethnolinguistics, paralinguistics, psycholinguistics, linguoculturology, new directions have spread widely, which have had a significant impact on the communication of culture and literature. In addition, linguistic, linguo-stylistic, lingo-poetic analyzes were the basis for cooperation and integration of literature and linguistics, in addition to studying the works of historical figures and analyzing their artistic value from a linguistic point of view in literary criticism.

Қазіргі таңда тіл мен әдебиеттің ерекшелігін зерттеу, айырмашылықтарын саралау, тілдің басқа салаларының дамып, жетілуіне жол ашты. Тіл арқылы этнолингвистика, паралингвистика, психоллингвистика, лингвомәдениеттану сынды жаңа бағыт кең етек жаюмен қатар, мәдениет пен әдебиеттің байланысуына анағұрлым әсерін тигізді. Сонымен қатар, әдебиеттануда тарихи тұлғалардың шығармаларын оқытып, көркемдік құндылығын тілдік тұрғыдан талдаудан бөлек, лингвистикалық, лингвостилистикалық, лингвопоэтикалық талдаулар әдебиет пен лингвистиканың бірлесіп, жымдасуына негіз болды.
